FON IS MAKING A NEW BUILDING WHILE REDUCING PROFESSORS SALARIES

APRIL 2020

The Faculty of organizational sciences in Belgrade decided to lower professors salaries by third at the beginning of the coronavirus crises despite the governments' reassurance public sector salaries would stay the same.

At the same time, the state-owned faculty began developing a new, luxurious wing of its building. The Faculty is obliged to invest half a million EUR in the following years to meet the contracts which raised concerns among some since it is not able to pay full salaries just a month after the pandemic took over.

Another problem emerges after the construction works were awarded to the companies with close ties to the city and republican government. BIRN revealed this story through contracts, correspondence and public procurement.
